State of the Industry | Update

President/CEO Danette Bewley reported the following:

- Airline CEOs are meeting with Kelly Ortberg, the new CEO of Boeing. They are expressing optimism that Mr. Ortberg will implement changes to improve the safety and reliability of their aircraft. The airlines have suffered huge losses during the past two years due to the grounding of large portions of their fleets after several high-profile incidents and accidents. The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) has capped their production to 38 per month, which presents challenges to the industry as the Boeing 737 is the world's most popular aircraft.

- ❑ Tucson continues to remain an attractive market to the airlines. Projections are for a 12% increase in capacity over the next several months.
- ❑ TUS secured a $55M grant from the FAA for the Airfield Safety Enhancement (ASE) Program.

Council Member Piña joined the meeting at 11:06 a.m.
